Investment strategy allocation

Long equities

Investing in a portfolio of equities based on the expectation that the underlying equities will increase in value within a certain time horizon. Each equity represents an ownership claim in an underlying company which is generally listed on a public stock exchange. The long equities portion of the portfolio includes exposure to large-cap, mid-cap and small-cap stocks.

Absolute bias

An investment strategy that seeks to generate returns, irrespective of the performance of traditional asset classes. These strategies use innovative investment techniques (including but not limited to short selling and leveraging) to profit from rising and falling markets, providing portfolio protection in the event an equity market experiences a significant fall.

Our investment style

Tom Marsico, MCM's founder, Chief Executive Officer, and Chief Investment Officer, has managed large-cap equities since 1979, and has a public investment track record dating to 1988. MCM's investment approach emphasise the selection of high-quality global growth companies with compelling potential for long-term capital appreciation. This high-conviction approach is expressed through concentrated portfolios. We search for growth globally by evaluating companies in industries around the world to uncover attractive investment opportunities, as well as to understand the competitive landscape on a world-wide basis. MCM's investment style and process has been consistent since the founding of the firm and has been employed in a variety of market conditions.

Our market outlook

The fund is positioned for the long-term compounding of assets, however the last 45 days have been tough for growth assets in general and specifically for some of the sectors the fund is exposed to. Marsico is expecting continued volatility through the first half of 2019 as global growth broadly decelerates and likewise the valuation for different asset classes recalibrates. Going forward, Marsico continues to have confidence in the positions in the portfolio, particularly with the significant reset in these assets over the last 45 days. Looking ahead Marsico is keenly interested in the development of monetary policy and trade discussions as these will shape the market environment for 2019 and will dictate potential portfolio decisions.

The basic tenets of Marsico's strategy remain the same. That is, a skew towards attractively valued, secular growth companies that are growing at rates well in excess of the broader market, with a focus on positive disruption of their industries.

Marsico continues to believe that long term factors such as population demographics, an abundant supply of key commodities including energy, and technological developments that enhance productivity, will shape the investment landscape. Therefore, the Fund remains skewed toward positively disruptive, secular, "platform" growth stories, particularly in the Information Technology sector.

Charity in focus: headspace

About headspace

headspace is the National Youth Mental Health Foundation providing early intervention mental health services to 12-25 year olds. headspace has 107 centres across Australia in metropolitan, regional and remote areas, as well as online and phone support services through eheadspace. headspace can help young people with mental health, physical health (including sexual health) alcohol and other drug services, and work and study support.

headspace and FGG

FGG partnered with headspace in 2016 to contribute much needed funding for the development and implementation of a National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Traineeship Program, offering training and employment of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander mental health workers.

All trainees are employed at nominated headspace centres across Australia in an Aboriginal youth community engagement capacity, as they study for a Certificate IV in Mental Health.

The program increases the availability and scope of mental health and wellbeing support services for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people aged 12-25 years across Australia, and importantly, in remote communities. Critically, FGG's funding contributes to the development of a long term sustainable Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander workforce, and enhances cultural awareness and effectiveness for delivery of headspace services for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people in remote Australia.

In 2017, the funds supported two trainees and one coordinator in headspace Darwin. Both trainees have now been offered full time employment after completing their traineeship. In 2018, the program was expanded to a further two headspace centres. The most recent FGG funding helped to support the engagement of two trainees and one coordinator in Darwin, one trainee in Townsville and one trainee in Broome.

Q&A with Jason Trethowan, CEO

What is your driving motivation?

As the CEO of headspace, there are many factors that drive me every day to continue working towards a mentally healthier generation for our young people, however, I gain inspiration and motivation from the young people themselves above all else. I am driven by a fair go for people, especially when support is needed most. Given that 75% of mental health challenges emerge before the age of 24, having a dedicated youth mental health offering like headspace gives every young Australian the opportunity for a fair go when they need us. That in itself is incredibly motivating so at headspace we absolutely aim high. I am personally motivated to do everything possible with our national headspace network to provide a safe, welcoming service which listens and understands what the needs of young people are.

What is the impact of FGG's support?

Having the support of FGG has allowed us to implement a National Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Traineeship Program offering training and employment to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people. These roles have focused predominantly on youth and community engagement, increasing access to mental health services and programs and increasing the mental health literacy of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people. This initiative has helped to build the cultural capacity of the headspace centres and ensure that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander young people access culturally relevant, high quality mental health care.
