BP awards hook-up and commissioning contract to Worley

Worley has been awarded a contract by BP for hook-up and commissioning integration services for BP's Mad Dog 2 project and the Argos deep-water platform in the Gulf of Mexico. Argos will be BP's newest floating production unit (FPU). It is planned to be commissioned in 2021.

Under the contract, Worley will prepare for arrival of the FPU in the Gulf of Mexico and complete final systems commissioning in Texas, offshore hook-up at the Mad Dog field and handover of the platform to BP's Global Operations Organization.

"Worley is looking forward to supporting BP's North American strategy through the integration of this new asset into BP's production fleet in the Gulf of Mexico," said Andrew Wood, Chief Executive Officer of Worley.
