Company commentary

Company performance for the month was 2.6%, while the benchmark returned 4.3% for the month. The key contributors and detractors are detailed under the Portfolio Commentary section below.

On the 9th December, the Board provided an update on the various initiatives in place to reduce the current share price discount to NTA, and followed it up with a further explanatory memo on 12th December. The most significant of these initiatives is the commitment by the Board to increase the buyback to 20% of the Company's shares, or in excess of $100m, subject to shareholder approval. This will be the largest buyback undertaken by any listed investment company on the ASX.

In addition, the Company moved from weekly to daily NTA disclosure, providing further transparency to shareholders and investors on the value of the Company's assets.

Market commentary

Global equities were strong in November (+4.3% in AUD) as trade tensions continued to ease amid a better than feared earnings season and improving economic data. Cyclical sectors outperformed led by Information Technology, Healthcare and Industrials whilst Utilities and Consumer Staples underperformed. Investors exhibited a preference for growth over momentum.

US equities outperformed as optimism that a preliminary US-China trade deal was imminent and broadly positive economic data supported sentiment. European equities gained amid signs of a trough in weak manufacturing data. The Brexit situation remained stable as we go into the UK election on the 12th December.

Asian equities lagged with emerging markets underperforming as strength in the US weighed on Asian currencies. China outperformed the region as weaker data and further unrest in Hong Kong were offset by the improvement in the trade backdrop. Japan continued to gain, consolidating October's outperformance.

Elsewhere, the steep move higher in global yields continued as investors re-priced less dovish expectations from major global central banks. This alongside strength in the US dollar weighed on gold.

Portfolio commentary

Key contributors included:

- Online Services cluster Asia, including Alibaba and LINE. Alibaba reported another strong result with ecommerce growing greater than 20% pa, and strong growth in cloud computing and offline retail, and LINE on news our shares would be bought post a takeover from Yahoo Japan.
- Consumer Cyclical cluster in developed and emerging markets, including UniCredit and KB Financial. UniCredit reported strong results which show the company continues to make strides towards repairing the balance sheet via cost control and selling non-core assets, and indicated an intention to return excess capital back to shareholders. KB Financial continues to respond to market expectations that global economic data has bottomed.

Key detractors included:

- Experia (Online Services cluster) as the company pays more to Google for search traffic. While Experia will incur higher advertising expenses, they continue to take market share and have a large opportunity to grow share in Europe which is a more fragmented hotel market relative to Experia's home market of the US.
