360 Capital Group (ASX: TGP) (the Group) is pleased to announce the launch of Cambridge Investment Partners (Cambridge), who will provide its clients (including 360 Capital and its funds) with capital raising capability (both listed and unlisted), underwriting, mergers & acquisitions, IPO & secondary offering management, restructuring and other corporate advisory services.

Adam Coughlan, who heads up the Cambridge team comments “We are extremely excited to be partnering with 360 Capital, a business that aligns with our aims of providing best in class asset management capabilities, across a range of mainstream and alternative investment strategies to our clients.”

Key Cambridge members and founding partners joining Adam are Charlie Wapshott, Emmanuel Vergara and Andrew Fitzpatrick. The team have previously worked together for more than 4 years at a leading private wealth and funds management firm in Australia. They have a deep network of long-standing private wholesale and retail investors in Australia and New Zealand. They also maintain close relationships with offshore family offices and institutional investors looking for opportunities to invest domestically across all sectors and asset classes.

The establishment of Cambridge bolsters the Group’s distribution capability across retail and private wealth investors. Cambridge will also take third party appointments, enabling them to work with respected funds management businesses both domestically and offshore, generating income and contributing to TGP’s earnings.

Tony Pitt, Group Managing Director of TGP said, “the addition of the Cambridge Team to the 360 Capital business is a reflection of our overall adaption to changing market conditions, broadening our platform and strategies to provide investors with access to a more diverse offering and income base”.

Cambridge has offices in Sydney, Melbourne and Brisbane. More information on Cambridge Investment Partners can be found at www.cambridgeip.com.au
