Description of Contractual Arrangement

IPP – ‘International Platform Provider’

Janison has an exclusive international agreement with the OECD for 5 years to licence its digital assessment platform to deliver the PISA for Schools assessment. Janison’s role in this arrangement is known as the International Platform Provider (IPP).

- Janison charges a minimum A$100,000 (Eur 60,000) p.a. for the licence of its platform, plus an additional A$250 (Eur 150) for every school above 200. Janison expects the average revenue per country to be approximately A$200,000 p.a.

NSP – ‘National Service Provider’

The entity chosen by the OECD to manage the in-country end-to-end process (recruitment, onboarding, training and support) for the PISA for Schools assessment is known as the National Service Provider (NSP). Janison provides the NSP with a licence to its assessment platform.

- Where Janison is the NSP it receives A$7,000 per school p.a.
- Janison is currently accredited by the OECD to be the NSP in Australia and the USA.

“For us, this is our mission – to be a global force for good by powering best-in-class educational assessments with passion and purpose. I congratulate the Janison team for working seamlessly with the OECD’s team to bring us to where we are today. We are seeing schools around the world unpacking the data in their confidential, customised reports and using the evidence to set strategic goals, address the gap between the least and most advantaged, leverage a global peer learning community and benefit from a holistic view which brings together heart and mind through the power of student voice.” said Janison CEO David Caspari

International agreement with the OECD

On 29th April 2019, Janison entered into a five-year exclusive partnership with the OECD to provide the digital solution for its PISA for Schools assessment globally.

PISA for Schools is an online assessment that supports individual school improvement efforts using benchmarking based on the OECD's Programme for International Student Assessment (PISA). It tests a sample of 15-year-old school students with two components:

- A cognitive test in reading, mathematics and science using scenario-based real-life questions - testing the application of knowledge.
- A questionnaire about a student's situation at home and school, reactions to the learning environment, and confidence and motivation for doing well at school.

Educators are reporting that this provides a low-stakes, high value opportunity for schools to benefit from reliable PISA data to drive improvement. Around the world they are unpacking the data in confidential, individualised reports and using the evidence to set strategic goals, address the gap between the least and most advantaged, leverage a global peer learning community and benefit from a holistic view which brings together heart and mind through the power of student voice.
