NZX/ASX Market Release

Appointment of Chief People & Culture Officer

The a2 Milk Company (“the Company”, “a2MC”) is pleased to announce the appointment of Amanda Hart as Chief People & Culture Officer.

Amanda will join a2MC from her most recent role as Head of Human Resources, Australia and New Zealand, with Dyson Appliances, having spent the past four years with the organisation as a senior human resources leader across several Asia Pacific markets with a focus on leadership development and organisational change.

Prior to her time at Dyson Appliances, Amanda held senior human resources roles with Cotton On Clothing and Global Radio.

In the Chief People & Culture Officer role with a2MC, Amanda will be responsible for driving the people strategy and executing integrated programmes focused on continuing to improve a2MC’s capability building, leadership development, employee engagement, diversity and inclusion, and pioneering culture.

David Bortolussi, Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer of a2MC, said, “Amanda is a highly capable people and culture leader with extensive consumer industry experience with innovative brands. The skills and impact Amanda has demonstrated, and her alignment with our culture at a2MC make her an excellent candidate for the role. Amanda is passionate about leadership development and employee experience, and I look forward to her joining the Company.”

Amanda will commence in her role on 6 September 2021 reporting to the Managing Director and CEO.
