MONTHLY SUMMARY

MAET.ASX, via the Munro Global Growth Fund returned 4.6% in May. Long equities, currencies and portfolio hedging all contributed to performance. Global markets were mixed in May, with the S&P finishing relatively flat. However, Artificial Intelligence (AI) was the big story of the month, which was largely driven by the quarterly earnings report of Nvidia. The stock rose over 20% on the day of reporting, putting it close to USD 1tr in market capitalisation. Additionally, investors followed the debate around the US debt ceiling until an eventual proposed resolution was put to Congress towards the end of the month. Top contributors came from our High-Performance Compute Area of Interest (AoI) - ASML, Nvidia, Synopsys and TSMC, all benefiting from the rise of AI. While the largest detractors were Visa and Luxury Goods company, LVMH, as investors continue to worry about the health of the US consumer. From a portfolio perspective, we remain encouraged by earnings outlooks for our portfolio holdings, which point to an acceleration in earnings growth from some of our key AoI's.
