THIS FACT SHEET IS FOR THE UNLISTED AND QUOTED CLASS OF UNITS IN THE LOOMIS SAYLES GLOBAL EQUITY FUND ('FUND')

- Loomis Sayles Global Equity Fund (Quoted Managed Fund) is the quoted class of units

MARKET CONDITIONS

Global equity markets were largely positive in the third quarter as resilient consumer spending and healthy corporate earnings continued to support investor sentiment. One of the most bullish themes in the US economy was a broadening of earnings growth beyond large-cap technology names. Inflation continued to cool over the period, prompting the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates by 50 basis points in September; while the rate cut was expected, equity markets rose after the announcement. The majority of sectors registered positive results. The real estate sector was the top performing sector returning over 12% for the period (proxied by the MSCI All Country World Index (Net)). The Utilities, Financials and Industrials sectors also outperformed the broader market. The Energy, Information Technology and Communication Services sectors posted the lowest returns.

PORTFOLIO PERFORMANCE

The Loomis Sayles Global Equity Fund returned 1.7%, underperforming the MSCI All Country World Index (Net) which returned 2.6% (also in AUD terms). Security selection in the consumer discretionary sector was the largest detractor from relative results. The Communication services sector and not having exposure to the Utilities sector also detracted on a relative basis. The Financials sector was the largest relative contributor; the Health Care and Industrials sectors also contributed to relative returns.

LEADERS

The three largest contributors to performance were Nomura Research Institute, Parker-Hannifin and S&P Global.

Shares of Japanese IT Services company Nomura Research Institute rose on back of strong demand for the company's core domestic offerings; Japanese enterprises are choosing to partner with Nomura Research Institute as they reinvest in technology infrastructure. We continue to view the stock as attractive on our scenario-based valuation framework.

Shares of Parker Hannifin rose on strength in aerospace and strong second quarter earnings, with margins and revenue surprising to the upside relative to our expectations.

S&P Global outperformed the broader market over the period, driven by a strong recovery in bond issuance. Its ratings business grew considerably in the second quarter, providing a meaningful boost to enterprise margins. We believe its ratings business will continue to have tailwinds in the coming years, underpinned by looming maturity walls which will likely require refinancing and subsequently a rating. The company also announced long-time executive Martina Cheung will replace Doug Peterson as CEO, effective November 2024. We believe Cheung is a natural successor and anticipate a seamless transition. We continue to view S&P Global as an attractive opportunity.

LAGGARDS

The three most significant detractors from performance were ASML, Airbnb and Alphabet.

Shares of ASML underperformed the broader market, as investors questioned whether the business could achieve the upper-end of its 2025 sales guidance of €30-€40B. Some of the doubt stemmed from increasing global tensions between the U.S. and China, with the potential of increasing export controls on semiconductor capital equipment. Although a possibility, we believe the impact would be minimal given the existing expansive export controls, as well as the trough levels seen in many of ASML's ex-China markets. Cohesion between the U.S., Netherlands, and Japan has been lacking beyond the initial round of export controls. Additionally, there are some lingering concerns around potential capital expenditure cuts by a US technology company that could impact EUV equipment orders. We wouldn't expect this to have a meaningful impact on ASML – US sales are a small percentage of ASML's total sales. We continue to view ASML as an attractive opportunity.

Shares of Airbnb declined in the period over concerns about slowing revenue growth and the potential need for more marketing spend to support revenue, which would impact margins. Concerns about consumer spend on travel also weighed on shares.

Alphabet shares underperformed the broader market after the August 5th ruling on the Department of Justice's antitrust lawsuit against the company. In summary, the judge ruled against Alphabet, noting that the company's $20 billion plus annual distribution agreements with Apple and other platforms are "impairing rivals opportunities to compete" in the search engine market. We have followed the case for a number of years and do not expect a quick resolution; the Department of Justice and Alphabet will submit preliminary remedy proposals. Alphabet will likely appeal, which would extend the process at least another year. While we expect some volatility over the next twelve months as the result of the case, we remain constructive based on our view of the company's Quality and Intrinsic Value Growth drivers, as well as a valuation that remains attractive.
