Appointment of Chief Operating Officer

Sydney Airport is pleased to announce that Hugh Wehby, the current Chief Financial Officer (CFO), has accepted the role of Chief Operating Officer (COO) from January 2017. In this role, Hugh will assume all responsibilities related to the Aviation Business including Safety, Security, Service Delivery, Airline Relationships, Aviation Business Development, Long-term Master Planning and consideration of the Western Sydney Airport opportunity.

Having recently led the Terminal 3 transaction and operational integration, Hugh was also integrally involved in the International Aeronautical Agreements signed in 2015 and their subsequent implementation. He has been in the aviation industry since 2005, working with airports in Australia, Europe, UK and North America focused on identifying strategic growth opportunities, operational and financial performance optimisation, negotiation of major airline and commercial contracts and mergers and acquisitions.

Hugh's appointment follows Shelley Roberts' resignation to take up an external CEO role. We thank Shelley for her substantial contribution to Sydney Airport over the past five years. To ensure a seamless transition, Shelley will remain in the business until Hugh commences in his new role in January.

A search for a new CFO has commenced.
