

SUCCESSION OF CHIEF TECHNOLOGY OFFICER

ANDREW TODD ANNOUNCED AS NEW CTO

DAVID WALKER ASSUMES NEW ROLE OF CHIEF ARCHITECT

IRESS today announced that IRESS' long-serving Chief Technology Officer, David Walker, will move into a new role of Chief Architect.

IRESS' Chief Executive Officer, Andrew Walsh, said: "David has played a critical role in the growth and success of IRESS as Chief Technology Officer.

"David joined IRESS in January 1995 and was appointed Chief Technology Officer in 2001. He has led a growing and successful team as IRESS has expanded in Australia and internationally.

"From January, David will step down from the executive team and become Chief Architect at IRESS, working in a part-time role focused on the technical design and architecture of IRESS' systems and solutions. We are pleased to have retained David's skills and experience within IRESS as part of a smooth transition."

IRESS is pleased to announce the appointment of Andrew Todd as Chief Technical Officer. Andrew will join IRESS in January 2017. The appointment follows a global search.

Andrew has been Chief Information Officer at IOOF Holdings since 2009. Before this he was Chief Information Officer at Australian Wealth Management, prior to its acquisition by IOOF. In these roles he has overseen large technology and operational change and efficiency programs while building a culture of technology innovation.

Andrew has also held senior roles with Standard & Poor's as head of information technology for the Pacific region and worked for PricewaterhouseCoopers and Volkswagen Financial Services in management and business roles.

Andrew Walsh said: "We are delighted Andrew is joining IRESS. With a strong track record in technology and delivery, he is well placed to continue strengthening IRESS' position as a leading supplier of technology to clients in Australia and internationally."
