Google will display and make the TYMLEZ Blockchain solution available for procurement, purchase, deployment, and use for Google Customers.

Google Cloud Marketplace offers ready-to-go development stacks, solutions, and services to accelerate development. The focus of the platform is to enable customers to spend less time installing and more time developing and deploying production-grade solutions, with a single bill of $1/ minute per node, the revenue split of 80% to Tymlez and 20% to Google for all 3rd party services and direct access to TYMLEZ support.

With “one-click” this will simplify the deployment and use of Blockchain based solutions and allow any global small, medium or multinational enterprise to implement automation through smart contracts, data logging and digital ownership rights in hours rather than months.

Examples of how the platform may benefit the Enterprise are “track and trace” in supply chain management, and managing proof of existence, verifying the existence of any computer file as of a specific time via time stamp transactions.

In July 2018, the Google Cloud Marketplace was assessed against Gartner's 263-point evaluation criteria for cloud Internet as a Service (IaaS). GCP meets 86% of required, 57% of preferred and 48% of optional criteria, making it a suitable option for technical professionals in charge of production deployment scenarios. In February 2019 Gartner released its 2019 Magic Quadrant naming GCP as a leader for data management solutions.

Commenting on the Google Cloud Marketplace vendor agreement and doing live, CEO of TYMLEZ, Reinier van der Drift, said: “After 12 months of hard work we are delighted to be able to bring our platform to Google Cloud Marketplace in such a short period of time. This is an exciting period for the company. The team is executing extremely well and we look forward to driving strong shareholder returns as we head into 2020.”
