Mining Right Application Update

West Wits Mining (ASX: WWI, “West Wits” or “the Company”) provides the following update with regards to the progress of the appeals process and mining right application for the Witwatersrand Basin Project (“WBP”) in South Africa.

The Company has received an update from the Department of Mineral Resources and Energy (“DMRE”) concerning the WBP Mining Right application. The DMRE advised that the documents in relation to the application are in good order and that its officers are busy processing the application. Further, in light of this progress the DMRE has indicated that it needs nothing more from the Company to complete processing of the application.

West Wits Chairman, Michael Quinert commented, “This final leg of the Mining Right application has been slower than expected and at times difficult to monitor. We therefore welcome this written confirmation from the department that the documentation is all in good order. Perhaps most importantly, the DMRE have indicated they require nothing further from us to complete the process. Whilst we will continue to press our cause carefully and prudently, we are confident this advice from the DMRE suggests the matter is now nearing a positive outcome. Our team, led by Jac van Heerden, are in a state of high readiness to commence operations in earnest as soon as the Mining Right is granted.”

Authorised for release by the Chairman of the Company.
