TYMLEZ Group Limited ("TYMLEZ" or "Company") is proud to announce that Eglantine Etienne will be joining the TYMLEZ Board as a Non-Executive Director, effective today.

Eglantine joins TYMLEZ during a period of exciting growth and where her years of experience working in the technology space will be instrumental in empowering the continued growth of the Company. With a wealth of experience leading large technology projects and teams across the world, Eglantine will help to shape the future of TYMLEZ by working closely with the CEO and operational team to deliver strategic advice and support technical development and delivery.

"Eglantine brings immense international experience and a unique skillset to the Board of TYMLEZ that will serve to accelerate our growth over the coming months," said TYMLEZ Acting-Chairman, Jason Conroy. "Having interviewed a number of potential candidates for the role, Eglantine's skillset, experience, and most importantly, determination, made her the stand-out candidate. I'm looking forward to working with Eglantine to drive maximum value for our shareholders."

Eglantine has a solid track record in delivering projects as diverse as new operating model design and implementation, transformation through technology, mergers and acquisitions, introduction of new ways of working and in-house innovation incubators and has, in parallel to her corporate career, launched a start-up project aiming at accelerating the adoption of new skills and network in the Australian market.

Eglantine is currently the CTO of PEXA, the operator of the world's first digital property exchange platform, where she oversees Technology and International expansion. Passionate about diversity, Eglantine has been actively involved as a mentor with asylum seekers and women in IT organisations.

Speaking on her appointment, Eglantine said, "TYMLEZ is in a unique position to contribute significantly to our main challenge globally, by leveraging cutting edge technology to track and act on carbon footprints. I'm thrilled to join the board at a critical phase of the Company's development and look forward to working with value oriented, passionate professionals."

The TYMLEZ Board is excited about the value Eglantine brings to the Company and is looking forward to her contributions as the business enters its next phase of growth.
