Upcoming near-term Milestones

Paradigm expects to report top-line data during September from the phase 2 study exploring change in synovial fluid biomarkers associated with joint destruction in knee OA patients. Data reported will include the change in baseline of synovial fluid biomarkers following treatment once and twice weekly with Zilosul® versus placebo. Clinical endpoints of improvements in WOMAC® pain and function following Zilosul® treatment versus placebo at day 56 will also be reported. The data collected from this phase 2 study will be the first OA clinical trial data reported by Paradigm since the release of the Phase 2B (PARA_OA_005) clinical trial data in 2018. The collective analyses of pain, function, joint structure, and biomarker levels following PPS therapy will provide informative data to assess the potential of PPS as a disease-modifying osteoarthritis drug (DMOAD).

To generate further data establishing the in vivo mechanism of action of PPS in disease modification and provide complementary data in parallel with the PARA_OA_008 human clinical trial, Paradigm is concurrently conducting a trial in dogs with naturally occurring OA at the U-Vet Werribee Animal Hospital.

Paradigm intends to have data from the canine OA model available for release to the market along with the interim analysis data from PARA_OA_008 in September.
