Realtor.com partnership goes live and accelerating US growth

Australia's number one real estate agent reviews website, RateMyAgent ("RMY") has announced a partnership with the second biggest United States real estate listings website, Realtor.com. The deal will see RMY tap into over 100 million additional users.

RateMyAgent has grown rapidly in the US, and currently has over 235,000 agents on its platform. There are now more than five times more US agents on the platform than in Australia.

At the same time, RMY has been growing other U.S. partnerships with MLS and major brokerages so that it now gets data feeds for over 1.1 million agents. This partnership accelerates RMY's U.S. growth strategy.

The integration of the platforms went live yesterday and means agents can automatically send reviews directly from RMY to Realtor.com. This, and the ability to stream to google, will help agents build their brand, trust and reputation. Adding significant value to agents who want to share their reviews across multiple platforms.

Michael Davey, CEO of RateMyAgent said, "Our integration with one of the largest real estate platforms in the US adds real value for agents. The integration will also drive brand visibility for RMY as it will enable over 100 million users to see agent reviews which we link to each transaction."

David Williams, Chairman said "We expects the added value this brings to agents on the RMY platform should enhance agents willingness to pay for our services."
