Coda is undervalued on an EV/Resource basis compared to its peers

EV/Resource multiple indicates the $ value per tonne of JORC compliant resource

Excludes all potential future resources at Emmie Bluff*

“Through our focus on low risk, high reward Resource definition and expansion, Coda Minerals is in the process of rapidly building a material copper inventory at the start of what promises to be a historic copper bull market. If you want exposure to Copper, think Coda Minerals.”

Based of a 75% ownership of 280,000 tonnes of CuEq at MG14 and Windabout*

Copper Fundamentals

“GFC history suggests copper will go on a colossal bull run in 2021.” – Stockhead, Dec 2020

Copper prices are now at seven-year highs, driven by China’s post-pandemic infrastructure drive and a forecast structural supply deficit.

“The copper supply is dwindling as current mines reach their exhaustion point, grades decline, input costs increases, and market faces a scarcity of high-quality projects.”

Supply and Demand Imbalance (000's t)

Significant investment today will be required to fill the deficit, which may be difficult considering the strong performance of other commodities as a result of the pandemic.

Copper Connects

The three most important growth sectors that will drive demand for copper are electric vehicles, renewable electricity generation and the construction sector as countries start rebuilding their economies.

ELECTRIC VEHICLES

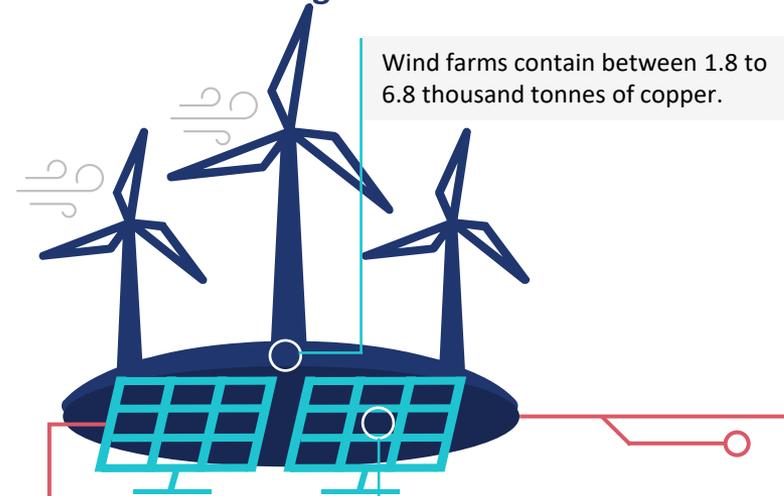

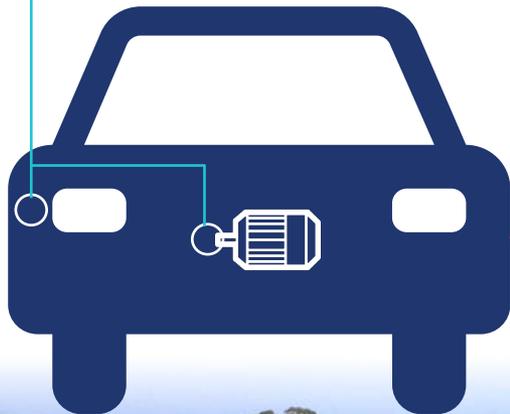

Copper is prevalent in three areas of electric mobility: energy storage, charging infrastructure and the production of vehicles.

- EV sales are expected to reach 52M in 2040

5 million charging ports will be required to support 7 million EVs in 2025.

EVs can contain up to 369kg of copper, depending on their size and type.

By 2030, >250,000 tpa will be needed as part of the windings in electric traction motors of EV.

Wind farms contain between 1.8 to 6.8 thousand tonnes of copper.

Solar photovoltaic farm requires 4 tonnes of copper per megawatt.

RENEWABLES

By 2050, renewable energy will account for 73% of global power generation. Renewables uses a considerable larger volume of copper than conventional thermal power.

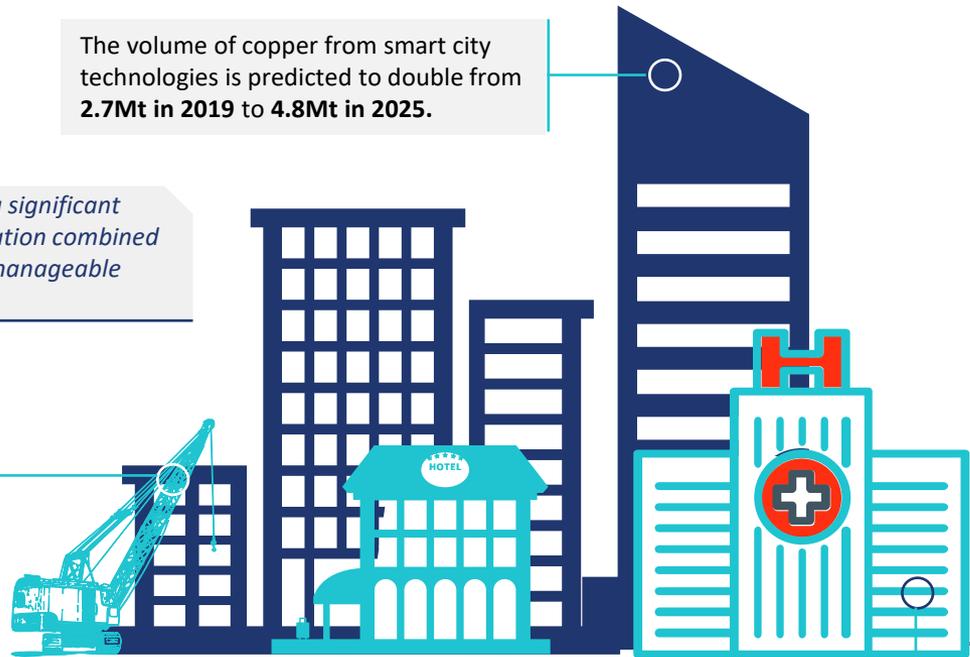

Copper Connects

CONSTRUCTION

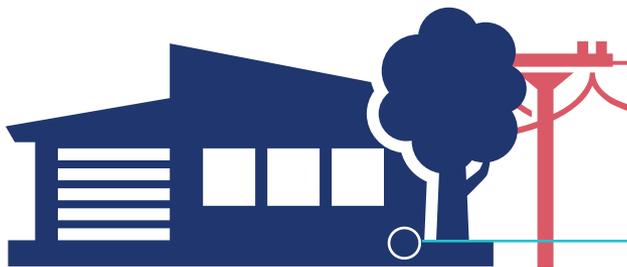

Global middle class is expected to grow to 5.6B by 2030, creating significant demand for buildings and infrastructure. Increasing urban population combined with the trend towards more sustainable, efficient and digitally manageable "smart cities" will require vast amount of copper.

The volume of copper from smart city technologies is predicted to double from 2.7Mt in 2019 to 4.8Mt in 2025.

China's manufacturing and construction sectors, which consumes half the world's copper, has rebounded quickly since the lockdown earlier this year. Demand is expected to continue to remain strong in these sectors, bolstered by Chinese government stimulus measures.

Copper's antimicrobial properties can eliminate 99.9% of certain bacteria within two hours of exposure. They are used in the manufacturing of high-touch surfaces like doorknobs and bed handles to make hospitals safer.

An average single-family home contains approximately 200kg of copper.
