archTIS Secures $535k Contract to Expand the Deployment of NC Protect within an Australian Commonwealth National Security Agency

Highlights

- archTIS has secured a contract with an Australian national security agency to procure additional NC Protect software licences.
- The total contract value is $535,000AUD for software licences and support.
- The agency is using NC Protect for secure, policy-based collaboration and sharing of sensitive information using a zero trust architecture.
- Largest archTIS / Nucleus Cyber sale to date via the Microsoft IP Co-sell partnership.

archTIS Limited (ASX:AR9), a global provider of innovation software solutions for the secure collaboration of sensitive information, today announced a contract for the deployment of NC Protect within an Australian national security agency (Customer).

The contract total, valued at $535,000, is payable upfront and covers software license and support for a period of 5-years at $107,000 of annual recurring revenue, allowing the national security agency to secure information collaboration and sharing in Microsoft collaboration applications with NC Protect's secure, policy-based zero trust architecture. The contract may be terminated for convenience by the Customer by notifying the Company in writing. To date and since inception, the Company has not experienced any contracts being cancelled for such convenience clauses.

The contract is the largest Microsoft IP Co-sell opportunity for archTIS/Nucleus Cyber to date, driving mutual customer success by providing enhanced security for Microsoft collaboration tools with NC Protect.

Kurt Mueffelmann, Global COO / US President, stated, "As a long-time Nucleus Cyber customer, we are pleased to see this national security agency extend their use of NC Protect. Tightly marketed and integrated into the Microsoft suite of collaboration tools, NC Protect enables agencies to enforce granular, zero trust based security at the document level. The growing level of engagement we have with Microsoft field reps through the Microsoft IP Co-Sell program allows us to do more account mapping to identify joint opportunities and ensure customer success."
