"These are very positive changes for Titan as it moves forward with its exploration activities in Southern Ecuador and as the Company aligns its activities with its core business. We thank Laurie for his work and efforts in the restructure of Titans Ecuadorian business and the facilitation of processes enabling exploration works to re-start at the Company's key projects.

These are exciting times for Titan and we pleased to see Matt Carr step up into the role as acting CEO where his experience and history on these projects can greatly assist the appropriate sizing and direction of activities on the group assets can enable rewards for our shareholders.

We are particularly pleased that Ms Tamara Brown who with significant North American capital markets and Ecuadorian experience has endorsed these projects and agreed to join the Board. In addition, her operational and technical experience and knowledge of Ecuadorian business and cultural practices will be of great assistance to our in-country team.

In addition, it is most pleasing that such an experienced and highly successful geologist in Mike Skead has also endorsed these projects and has moved to Ecuador to manage their progression as COO and Country Manager. When such a successful and renowned geologist makes such a move motivated by his passion for geology and a view that he can make yet another major discovery should be very comforting for our shareholders and future investors.
