Trieste Lithium Project Update

Loyal Lithium Limited (ASX: LLI) (Loyal or the Company) provides an important update regarding its 12-week exploration program at the Trieste Lithium Project in the James Bay region of Quebec, Canada, considering the current forest fire situation in the area.

Due to the ongoing extreme fire danger in the Province of Quebec, all exploration companies, including Loyal Lithium, have suspended field activities across a significant portion of the province, including the Trieste Lithium Project. Loyal Lithium's in-country geology partner, Dahrouge Geological Consulting, had originally planned to commence activities in June. However, they have since demobilized until further notice.

The Company is actively monitoring the situation to ensure compliance with relevant governmental decrees and to prioritize the safety of all personnel associated with the Property.

Loyal Lithium remains in close communication with its contractors, with the intention of resuming exploration activities as soon as conditions permit. The Company is committed to providing further updates as more information becomes available.
