HIGHLIGHTS

- Maiden field program at Schryburt Lake returned exceptional results with new REE-niobium discoveries at Blue Jay, Blackbird and Hummingbird
- High grade results at Blue Jay returned up to 3.6% TREO and 0.7% Nb₂O₅ that's associated with a 650 m wide thorium anomaly and magnetic low
- Resampling of historical trenches from Goldfinch confirmed previous results of 7.6m @ 0.3% Nb₂O₅ and rock chips of 1.8% Nb₂O₅ as well as previously unknown REE mineralisation up to 0.3% TREO including 130 ppm Sc₂O₃
- Mineralisation at Goldfinch is associated with a 1,000m wide thorium radiometric anomaly and prominent magnetic high
- Cash Balance of A$1.48M at the end of September 2023 Quarter

Bindi Metals Limited (ASX: BIM, “Bindi” or the “Company”) is pleased to deliver the September Quarter Activities Report to shareholders. During the quarter, Bindi completed fieldwork and detailed geophysics at the Schryburt Lake REE-niobium Project in Northern Ontario, Canada.

Operations

Schryburt Lake Rare Earth and Niobium Project

Bindi completed its maiden field program at Schryburt Lake during the quarter, collecting 45 rock chips from limited outcrop and 130 biogeochemical samples for an orientation program. Historical trenches were relocated and sampled. Bindi also completed a 50m spaced, highly detailed aeromagnetics and radiometrics survey with preliminary images received during the quarter. Thorium radiometrics are utilised as anomalies have a strong association with REE-niobium mineralisation in carbonatites but radiometric anomalies will be limited to areas of outcrop, while mineralisation may extend undercover.

Figure 1. (Left) REE mineralisation (red mineral) 3.6% TREO and 0.5% Nb₂O₅ from the Blue Jay prospect and (right) historical trench at Goldfinch with results of 7.6m @ 0.3% Nb₂O₅ and grabs up to 1.82 % Nb₂O₅ with resampling returning 0.35% TREO, 0.2% Nb₂O₅ and 130 ppm Sc₂O₃

The field program defined several highly prospective REE-niobium zones at Schryburt Lake with extensive mineralisation identified across the carbonatite intrusive complex (Table 1).

At Blue Jay, Bindi geologists discovered high grade REE-niobium mineralisation up to 3.6% TREO and 0.7% Nb₂O₅ centred on a 650 m wide thorium radiometric anomaly. Subcropping mineralisation at Blue Jay was encountered over 110m of strike with an average grade of 1.3% TREO as well as an additional zone 50m to the north returning 0.7% TREO and 0.2% Nb₂O₅. Mineralisation is open in all directions and is associated with a strong magnetic low feature. Results at Blue Jay suggest mineralisation is REE-rich within this part of the system.

Prospect	Selected New Rock Chips	Historical	Radiometrics	Magnetics
Blue Jay	110m strike (open) of: 3.6% TREO, 0.5% Nb ₂ O ₅ 2.2% TREO, 0.5% Nb ₂ O ₅ 2.2% TREO, 0.1% Nb ₂ O ₅ 0.8% TREO, 0.7% Nb ₂ O ₅ Sample 50m north: 0.7% TREO, 0.2% Nb ₂ O ₅	New discovery	650m by 600m thorium anomaly	2.8km concentric magnetic low
Goldfinch	240 m by 120m area of > 0.2% TREO (open) including: 0.3% TREO, 0.2% Nb ₂ O ₅ , 130 ppm Sc ₂ O ₃ (26% NdPr)	Trench - 7.6m @ 0.3% Nb ₂ O ₅ (open) Grab samples 1.8% Nb ₂ O ₅	1,000m by 800m thorium anomaly	1.6km north- south magnetic high
Blackbird	230m by 190m area of >0.2% TREO (open) including: 0.4% TREO and 0.2% Nb ₂ O ₅	New discovery	400m by 350m thorium anomaly	1.5km concave magnetic low
Hummingbird	100 m strike of >0.3% TREO and 0.1% Nb ₂ O ₅ (open)	New discovery	Mostly undercover	1 km N-S magnetic high on carbonatite rim

Starling	Under cover	Drill - 1.5m @ 5.7% TREO (open)	750m by 550m thorium anomaly	1.5km circular magnetic low
----------	--------------------	---------------------------------------	------------------------------------	--------------------------------

Table 1. Summary of exploration results from September quarter field work

Historical niobium mineralisation recorded at the Goldfinch prospect area (7.6m @ 0.3% Nb₂O₅ that is open and grab samples up to 1.8% Nb₂O₅) was confirmed in resampling of trenches returning 0.2% Nb₂O₅ as well as REE mineralisation (never previously sampled for) up to 0.3% TREO. REE mineralisation >0.2% TREO was encountered over 240m and is open in all directions. Niobium-REE mineralisation at Goldfinch is associated with an extensive thorium radiometric anomaly over 1,000m and a prominent magnetic high. Mineralisation at Goldfinch suggests this part of the system is niobium-rich.

At Starling, detailed magnetics defined a circular magnetic low feature over 1.5 km with a subtle thorium anomaly within the core of the system. This anomaly is located on historical drilling which recorded a single REE assay of 1.5m @ 5.7% TREO that is open in all directions (while drilling primarily sampled for phosphate). No rock samples were collected due to the depth of cover glacial till.

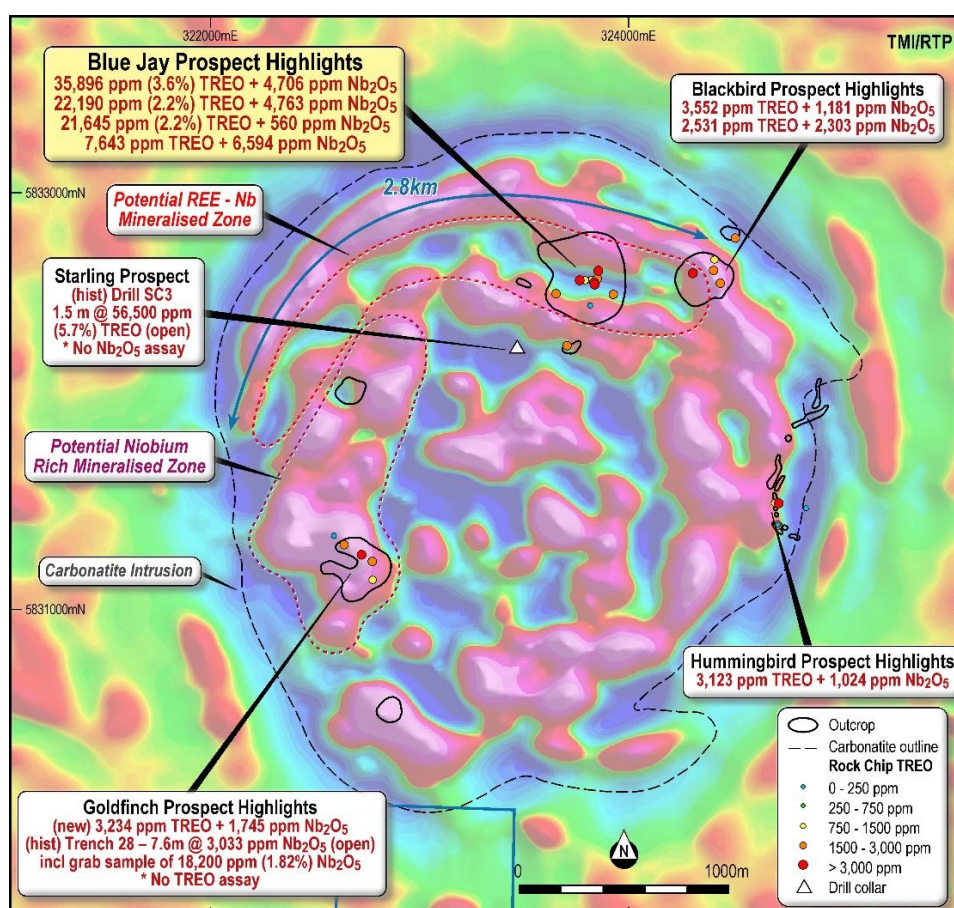

Figure 2. Preliminary TMI/RTP magnetics image with rock chip assay results. Note limited zones of outcrop/subcrop on topographic highs are typically below <1m of glacial till for sampling

A new discovery was also made at Blackbird with mineralisation >0.2% TREO encountered over a 240 m by 190m area centred on a 400m wide thorium anomaly. Mineralisation is open in all directions.

Results from the work suggest the prospects identified from fieldwork and detailed geophysics demonstrates the carbonatite intrusive complex has several mineralised intrusives bodies that have the potential to host significant REE-niobium resources.
