K2fly joins GE Digital Alliance Program

Highlights:

- K2F have become a GE Digital Alliance Partner.
 - Enhances the K2F sales and distribution strategy of partnering with world class/leading organisations.

Enterprise asset management technology company K2fly Limited (ASX: K2F) is pleased to announce that it has joined the GE Digital Alliance Program.

K2fly believe that digital industrial transformation promises both immediate cost benefits and long term strategic advantages to its growing list of industrial clients.

GE Digital's Predix edge-to-cloud platform for the Industrial Internet of Things is specifically designed for the unique and complex challenges of industrial companies, spanning industries from aviation and healthcare to utilities. This unique and flexible platform is being adopted by industrial leaders around the world. Organisations use this platform to create innovative Industrial Internet applications that turn real-time operational data into insights for better and faster decision - making while maximizing machine efficiency.

Under the terms of the Agreement, K2fly plans to work with the GE Digital teams with a range of clients in the Resources, Transport and Utilities sectors. K2fly will deliver consultancy and implementation services in support of GE's Predix platform, and is building a business unit dedicated to support this Partnership.

Commenting on the partnership, K2fly CEO and Executive Chairman, Brian Miller stated,

"GE Digital has been acknowledged as a leader in this area and we are keen to collaborate and explore opportunities, especially within our existing Mining and Electricity Clients. K2fly is building a portfolio of leading edge technologies which will deliver significant revenue growth in 2018 and beyond as the Industrial Internet of Things penetration increases.
