

ASX RELEASE – Flamingo AI

New CTO Appointed

SYDNEY, September 12, 2018, Flamingo AI Limited (“Flamingo” or the “Company”) (ASX: FGO), Artificial Intelligence and Machine Learning company, provider of Cognitive Virtual Assistant technology, is pleased to announce the appointment of Mr Tony Coorey as incoming Chief Technology Officer (“CTO”). This will facilitate an effective handover from outgoing CTO, Mr Joe Waller, who will leave the Company and move into a Board Advisory role with Flamingo AI.

Mr Coorey brings significant experience in commercialising and scaling technology platforms. Tony has previously worked as Chief Technology Officer at Elsevier Science Publishing, a division of Reed Elsevier (REL:LN and RENX:NYSE) and as Chief Technology Officer for GraysOnline, subsequently acquired by Eclix (ECX:ASX), where he worked closely with Flamingo AI’s Chief Commercial Officer, Mr Mark Kehoe. Mr Coorey’s role at Flamingo will include responsibility for all technology and IT leadership, and, as a member of the senior management team, will provide strategic advice about technological approaches to maximise the company’s opportunity to achieve its business objectives through innovative solutions and partnerships.

Mr Waller stated “I am very happy to have led the development of Flamingo AI’s technology platform, technology team and machine learning capabilities over the past three years. We have a world class product and platform. I am thrilled to be handing over to somebody as capable as Mr Coorey who will bring valuable experience to the company.”

The Company’s CEO & Founder, Dr Catriona Wallace stated, “Under Joe’s leadership of the technology team we have built a product and platform that is being used by some of the world’s leading brands and largest companies. We are extremely pleased that someone with Tony’s expertise is now joining the Company to support the Company’s next growth phase focused on the commercialisation of the platform.”
