Diversified contractor Brierty Limited (ASX: BYL) is pleased to announce it has been awarded a $69 million contract by Main Roads Western Australia to upgrade the North West Coastal Highway between Mia-Mia and Barradale, in the Gascoyne and Pilbara regions of Western Australia, in joint venture with local contractor Bocol Constructions.

The project covers approximately 102 kilometres of road and includes the design and construction of two bridges, widenings, earthworks, pavements, drainage, and associated road infrastructure. Design works will commence in January 2015, with the contract expected to be completed by the end of 2016.

Brierty Managing Director Peter McBain said the contract further built on the Company's strong track record in designing and constructing major road projects for Main Roads Western Australia, particularly on regional roads.

"Brierty has a long history with Main Roads and we have won repeat business by consistently delivering projects successfully, safely and on time," Mr McBain said.

"This is an important project and adds to the road upgrade works Brierty is currently delivering for Main Roads in regional Western Australia on the Great Northern Highway and on the Great Eastern Highway. It is also in addition to road works we're doing for Perth Airport in constructing the new Airport Drive and the roads we are currently building for Rio Tinto in the Pilbara.

The timing of the commencement of the construction phase of this project will align perfectly with the availability of resources finishing at other road projects.

"We greatly value our longstanding relationship with Main Roads and look forward to successful and safe delivery on this project."
