

Senex appoints Executive General Manager Exploration

Release Date: 29 April 2015

Senex Energy Limited (Senex, ASX: SXY) has appointed David Spring as Executive General Manager Exploration, commencing early May 2015.

David comes to Senex with a wealth of technical and leadership experience from more than thirty years in the oil and gas industry. He has enjoyed a varied and distinguished career including senior leadership roles in Australia, North America, Europe and the Middle East.

David began his career as a geophysicist at Esso Australia, gaining experience in the Cooper Basin, before spending over a decade with BHP Billiton Petroleum in Australia and overseas. He comes to Senex from Mubadala Petroleum, the sovereign E&P company in the United Arab Emirates. In this role David was accountable for leading Mubadala's global exploration portfolio.

David's appointment to the vacant role of Executive General Manager Exploration follows a comprehensive global search process.

Senex Managing Director Ian Davies said that David's extensive experience as an explorationist and business leader would bring considerable capability to Senex as the Company continues to progress its exploration led growth strategy.

"We are delighted to welcome David to the team. David is a high calibre leader who brings a proven track record and global experience to this pivotal role within Senex," he said.
