Anyvision announces collaboration with one of the world's largest diamond exchange facilities

Top End Minerals Limited [ASX:TND] (the Company or TND) is pleased to advise that .Anyvision has announced the collaboration with one of the world's largest diamond exchange facilities

Anyvision has released the following press release.

“The diamond industry is one of Israel’s leading export industries in the State of Israel. Israel imports rough diamonds to the value of approximately US$5 billion per year – constituting about 40% of the total world rough diamond production! The value of Israel’s diamond exports stands at about US$10 billion per year, of which approximately US$7 billion are polished diamonds. Israel’s main export markets are the United States, Hong Kong and Europe. On any given day, around $10bn of the precious stones are on site, in safes, boxes, pouches or piled on the white paper blotters of some of its 2,500 registered “diamantaires”, the traders and cutters of the stones. Total of three buildings, owned and operated by the directorate of the organization. The buildings are connected by internal bridges and together they form a closed and secure diamond trading compound – a complex considered the largest and safest in the world. The complex of Diamond Exchange buildings covers an area of about 80,000 square meters housing approximately 1,050 diamond offices; the trade halls are equipped with the best technology.

Anyvision has developed a special Anti-Tailgating solution, which opens a whole new market for large facilities with high security demands. Anyvision is now working on also securing a deal to protect the entire compound, which has more than 1500 cameras installed in it.”

Top End is currently preparing the documentation to seek shareholder approval for the Anyvision transaction which includes expert’s reports and a prospectus and will convene a general meeting as soon as possible.
