Westpac provides metrics for systemically important banks

While Westpac is not designated as a Global-Systemically Important Bank (G-SIB), the Australian major banks must now disclose certain metrics that are required to be reported by G-SIBs. This disclosure is required by Australian prudential standard APS330 (Attachment H).

These metrics are as at 30 September 2015 and are used to assess whether a bank is a G-SIB. Updated metrics will be provided annually around this time each year.
