COLLABORATIVE TEST PROGRAM

Redflow advises of its involvement in a test program jointly operated by the Texas Sustainable Energy Research Institute (TSERI) and Southwest Research Institute (SwRI). The initiative has been co-funded by a consortium of companies including Microsoft.

This collaborative test program, based at the University of Texas at San Antonio, has spanned over the last five months and continues to test two Redflow ZBM2s, among other flow batteries, to assess their suitability for a range of applications.
