ASX/Media Announcement

Appointed to supply services to South Australia's Northern Expressway

3 February 2009, Melbourne: Traffic Technologies is pleased to announce it has signed a contract with Fulton Hogan York Joint Venture as a key supplier for Traffic Management Services for the Northern Expressway and the Port Wakefield road upgrade. The total projects are valued at $564 million. They involve the construction of a new 23 kilometre Expressway and an upgrade of the Port Wakefield Road, which will reduce driving time and increase safety for road users from South Australia's Mid-North, Riverland and regional communities.

An initial seven rotational crews along with supporting equipment have been deployed by the Company in its very early stage. This number is expected to grow rapidly as construction progresses. The contract was secured after a competitive tender process and potentially over the life of the project will add substantial growth to our South Australian operations

"Due for completion in December 2010 the Northern Expressway is the largest road construction project in South Australia since the 1960's and securing traffic management services to the project is a further endorsement and recognition of Traffic Technologies abilities in providing high levels of safety and services along with related equipment to major infrastructure projects across the country," said Chief Executive Officer, Mr. Con Liosatos.
