The past week has been a busy one for financial markets as well as for the Fund with last week's FOMC, the midterm elections and the key US CPI inflation data. We have been of the view that both equity and bond markets could rally into the end of the year as inflation shows signs of peaking and the dollar eases. This seems to have transpired on Thursday with the one of the larger rallies in history for the US indices. We consistently added back risk exposure to our portfolio over the past few weeks, and specifically in precious metals where equity valuations have become historically cheap. We also added to our holding in Paradigm Biopharmaceutical with the market not yet adequately pricing in the total addressable market potential of the new osteoarthritis drug Zilosul® in Stage III clinical trials.
