The WAM Alternative Assets (ASX: WMA) investment portfolio increased in May, driven by the private equity component of the investment portfolio.

We continue to identify compelling investment opportunities in the current market environment. Previously overlooked sectors, such as office real estate, are presenting attractive buying opportunities with valuations having been impacted by increased vacancies and hybrid working post pandemic. Investors with strong asset management expertise can benefit by acquiring these assets at attractive prices from motivated sellers and create value through development and leasing activity. Additionally, falling interest rates and lower levels of future supply driven by high construction costs, are expected to provide tailwinds for rent and valuations of prime and A-grade office assets.

WAM Alternative Assets has co-invested $5.0 million alongside Wentworth Capital in 100-130 Harris Street, Pyrmont, a trophy creative office asset in Sydney. The property provides a compelling rental yield, is occupied by blue-chip tenants on long-term leases and has strong environmental credentials. Wentworth Capital's best-in-class asset management capabilities have already delivered notable improvements in upgrading the building facilities and actively managing the leasing. We are excited to gain further exposure to this high-quality real estate asset, which offers multiple value add opportunities including future rental growth, upside from the upcoming delivery of the Pyrmont metro and surrounding revitalisation, and additional development potential beyond the original investment case to increase density on part of the asset. WAM Alternative Assets' co-investment will be deployed by Wentworth Capital in June 2025.
