Etherstack wins Australian Federal Police equipment supply contract

Etherstack today announced that its Australian subsidiary, Auria Wireless Pty Limited, has won a competitive tender process to supply tactical communications equipment to the Australian Federal Police.

The order is the second placed by the Commonwealth of Australia in the past 6 months for secure tactical communications equipment, and follows on from previous successful deliveries of the same Australian designed equipment to US government agencies.

"It is great to support the efforts of the Australian Federal Police after our many years of success overseas. Our unique technology offerings are in use by public safety and security agencies in the US, UK and Canada. We are excited to be building local traction for our solutions" said Etherstack CEO, David Deacon.
