Company Announcement 18th December, 2013

SOLOMON BDM SYSTEM RUNNING LIVE

Promadis has successfully implemented its BDM for Civil Registries software application for the Solomon Islands nation. The need for accurate, reliable and efficient keeping of vital records in the Registry is essential in fulfilling legislative obligations as well as minimising budgets associated with running public services. New social and government considerations, including health and national security, have increased the demand for delivering services via a system such as BDM which is both flexible and powerful to suit constantly changing needs.

Promadis won the tender for the Solomon Islands requirements, with its secure, fast, reliable, efficient, feature rich and cost-effective software solution which will now modernise record-keeping for the nation.

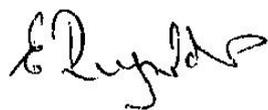

UNICEF have been assisting the Solomon Islands government for a number of years, and have had in place a target to be able to register all births in the Solomon Islands by 2015. Up until recently, The Solomon Islands had one of the lowest birth registration tallies amongst the Pacific nations but that is now set to be turned on its head with the implementation of this new system. UNICEF has worked with the Ministry of Home Affairs, Civil Registration and the Ministry of Health and Medical Services, to bring a partnership opportunity to these arms of government.

An official ceremony is to take place early in 2014 to mark the important milestone of achieving the computerisation of the birth registry.

The Promadis solution has a very good track record of looking after the state registry needs in Australia and is now set to expand further into the international scene with a deal of interest now being shown from off-shore as a result of this project.
