InfoMaster re-affirms strategy of innovation with (circa) half a million dollar R&D tax grant

24 April, 2012. InfoMaster Pty Ltd ("InfoMaster"), a wholly-owned subsidiary of Sirius Corporation Limited (ASX code: SIU), has announced it has today received an amount of $479,000 arising from a R & D tax claim in respect of eligible expenditures for the year ended 30 June, 2011.

Sirius Corporation Managing Director & Group CEO, Tony Onsley commented that "we are committed to supporting Australian R&D. Our focus is on supporting and investing in the development of new and innovative technology that enhances and advances our clients business. In our local government market we have been working on solutions that assist our clients in improving efficiency and enhancing their community engagement, while in asset management the development has been on providing business intelligence tools that assist clients in better decision making"

Andrew Lutterbeck, InfoMaster CEO stated "the R&D programs are based on developing solutions for the emerging needs of our clients and the business challenges they face. In a competitive market we recognise the importance of being always innovative in the market and will continue to research and develop competitive value based solutions for our customers."
