OPUS WINS MULTI-MILLION DOLLAR CONTRACT WITH AUSTRALIAN ELECTORAL COMMISSION

OPUS Group's Canberra based business CanPrint Communications has won a three year, multi-million dollar contract to supply content delivery services to the Australian Electoral Commission (AEC), the government body responsible for conducting federal elections and referendums and maintaining the Commonwealth electoral roll.

Following a competitive tender process, CanPrint Communications was selected as the preferred partner to assist the AEC to communicate with eligible voters via multiple content delivery formats. The contract carries an approximate value of AUD$4 million over 3 years, and includes options to extend.

CanPrint Communications' General Manager Sam Holden said: "This confirms the benefit of CanPrint's investment in and development of a full document-management service, highly confidential, timely and security sensitive work, experienced account managers, central-ACT location and reflects our proven track record for working with government."

"OPUS' proprietary IPALM system allows us to co-ordinate all aspects of content delivery. It is fundamental to OPUS' strategy – to provide an end-to-end value chain for our customers, from creation to consumption."

The Australian Electoral Commission represents a new business win for CanPrint and complements the existing secure, government based, multi-channel distribution of content and business services operation that is part of the OPUS regional offer.
