YOJEE STARTS TESTING NEW LOGISTICS BETA APP 'YOJEE DRIVER'

Yojee Limited (ASX: YOJ), a pioneering platform technology company delivering powerful logistics and supply chain management capabilities via its' proprietary block chain enabled software to the South East Asian region, is pleased to announce it has opened up beta access to a new mobile app service for selected participating companies.

Yojee advises that the "Yojee Driver" app is now available in the iOS app store and Google Play store for Android to enable a pilot period to be run during Q3 and Q4 of the 2016 calendar year, which depending on the feedback from carriers on the user experience and feature requirements, will then be made available to the wider Yojee partner network.

Yojee Managing Director, Ed Clarke, said: "This is a really crucial milestone that allows us to test our app in Singapore and Australia with real users, gather feedback and make important improvements before launching more widely, ensuring that we are offering a simple-to-use and best-in-class business tool."

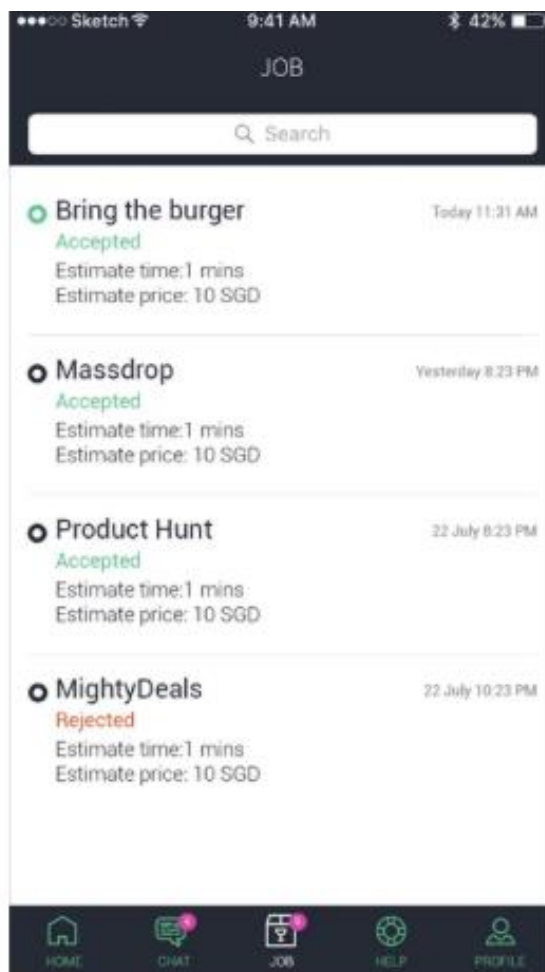

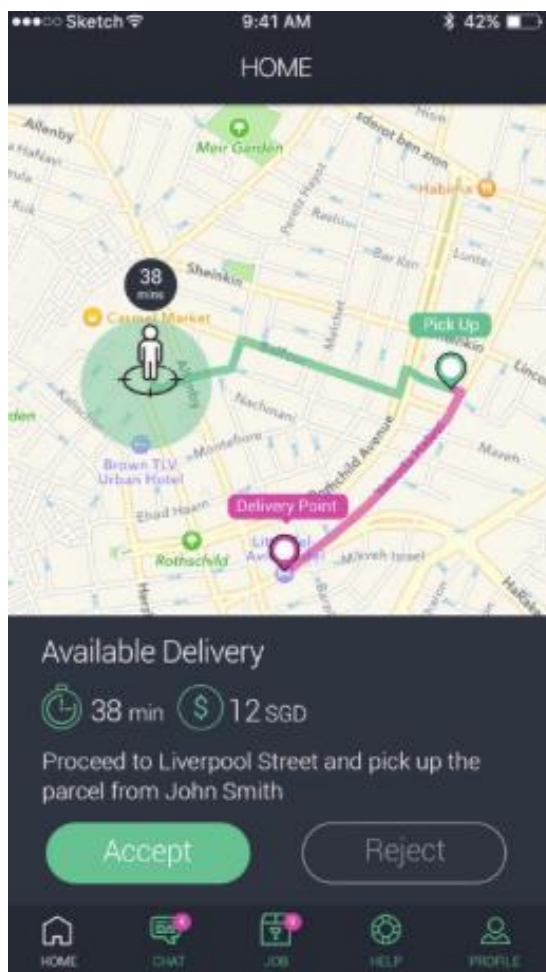

The goal of the developers is to get the design to the point where no training is required for users. This has been achieved by software user experience experts who have broken down the traditional logistics applications and rebuilt the workflow to make it more intuitive and reduce the number of steps to complete a task.

The Yojee Driver App includes the following features:

- Real time tracking
- Driver status
- Ability to select from a range of vehicle types
- Real time chat messaging
- Job history
- Estimated delivery time
- Cost or revenue of job

The closed beta app has just been released on the ios app store and is available for use to selected partners only. (iOS Click here) (Android Click here).
