Urgent Technology Update

Techniche Limited (“the Company”) is pleased to advise that Jesse Klebba has been formally appointed CEO of the Urgent Group of Companies. Based in Chicago, Jesse has been with Urgent for approx. 10 years and was previously the President of US Operations.

Jesse, who has been Acting CEO of Urgent, has an extensive understanding of the FM industry, particularly in the North American retail fuel market, is well regarded by staff and customers, and has a strong technology background, previously working for Plutus Enterprises and Accenture Corp.

We are also pleased to advise that Urgent have appointed 2 new Business Development Managers, one based in Chicago, and the other in the UK.

Kinga Makenas has been appointed Business Development Manager in the US. Kinga’s prior role was the North American Implementation Manager where she owned the implementation of eMaintenance product from project kickoff to closure. She has become an expert in the product features and benefits, which has given her the industry experience and knowledge to translate our technical capabilities to benefits for our customers.

Prior to Urgent, Kinga spent 4 years as a professor at the Keller Graduate School of Management leading instruction of the graduate course in Technology, Business and Project Management.

Steve Inglis has been appointed Business Development Manager in the UK. Steve is an experienced Senior Business Development Executive who was previously a Business Development Director for IHS Global, a technical, economic/financial information and consultancy services company, where Steve was responsible for managing strategic accounts in multiple verticals.

With the successful launch and deployment of the new product, eMaintenance Plus in the US, Europe and Australia to a number of large petrol retailers, and an increased focus on lead generation in the retail fuel markets in the US and Europe, it is expected that the appointments will deliver new sales growth in the near future.
