Kogan.com accelerates sell-through of excess inventory and reduction in operating costs delivering strong cash position

Kogan.com Limited (the Company; Kogan.com; ASX: KGN) is pleased to announce a strong cash position, accelerated sell-through of final excess inventory, which also delivered reducing warehousing costs, and the continued growth of Kogan First Subscribers and Kogan Mobile Active Customers during the three months ended 30 September 2022 (1QFY23).

The quarter reflected a period of subdued sales activity for the Company, while cycling a quarter in the prior year that was heavily impacted by COVID-19 lockdown orders. The Company remains focussed on reducing the final lots of excess inventory, reducing operating costs, and streamlining the business to return to the levels of operating margins previously delivered prior to COVID-19 pandemic. The Company anticipates that the vast majority of this final sell-through will occur by early calendar year 2023.

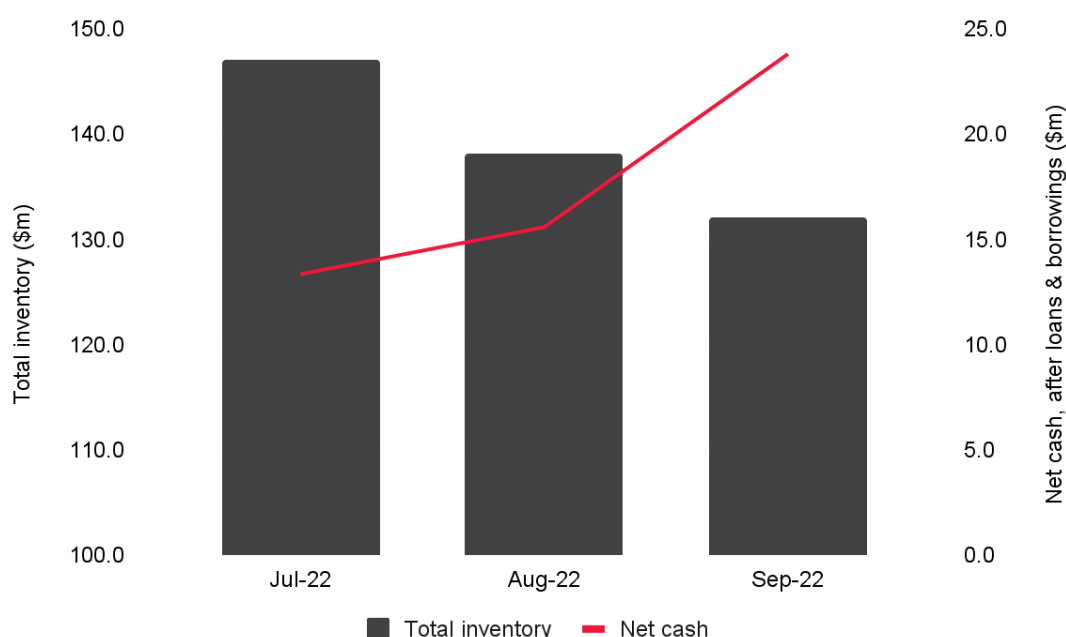

The Company does not believe that the 1QFY23 trading result is indicative of its projected trading performance, once the final sell-through of excess inventory has been completed. The Company looks to 2HFY23 with confidence in its ability to return to a nimble, agile and inventory-light business that delivers strong operating margins.

Founder and CEO of Kogan.com, Ruslan Kogan, said:

"Great value and choice have never been more important than now. Inflation and rising interest rates are putting pressure on households across Australia and New Zealand. It's in the Kogan.com DNA to obsess over delivering the most in demand products and services at the best possible prices. We know that during periods of belt tightening like this, our responsibility to be the best place for Aussies and Kiwis to get a bargain on their key household items is more important than ever. While there is a lot of uncertainty in the world, we're optimistic and excited to continue delighting our millions of customers and the growing base of loyal Kogan First subscribers."
