Resignation of Amcom CEO

Amcom Telecommunications Limited (ASX: AMM) wishes to advise that following the successful implementation of the Scheme of Arrangement to merge with Vocus Communications Limited (ASX: VOC), Mr James Spenceley CEO of Vocus will assume the role as CEO and Managing Director of the combined group.

As a consequence, Amcom's CEO Clive Stein will be stepping down from the role effective 29 June 2015 as foreshadowed in the Scheme of Arrangement back in December 2014.

Amcom Chairman Mr Tony Grist said "Clive saw the compelling logic in pursuing the combination with Vocus very early. It has now been more than six months since we announced the Scheme Implementation Agreement and in that time Clive has worked with his management team to ensure a smooth transition could occur.

"When Clive was appointed as CEO in 2007, Amcom's market value was around $60m. Over the past 8 years, Clive has steered the Company to a ten-fold increase in value during a period of great change in our industry. He is an innovative leader. He is able to lead his teams to achieve outcomes they did not think possible. On behalf of the Board and the rest of the Amcom team, I would like to thank Clive for his tremendous contribution to Amcom and wish him the best for his next challenge" added Mr Grist.
